Bernard Fensterwald Jr., a Washington lawyer who represented James McCord during Watergate and James Earl Ray, convicted of killing Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., heads the Committee to Investigate Assassinations, a group of private citizens that has investigated the slayings of President John F. Kennedy and others. He was interviewed by Washington Star Staff Writer Michael J. Satchell.

Q: The Committee to Investigate Assassinations has long been suspected by some people of being somehow connected with the CIA and you yourself being labeled possibly a CIA agent or CIA plant. Are you in fact a CIA agent of any sort?

Fensterwald: No, I'm a full-time lawyer. Neither I nor my partner have ever been affiliated with the CIA or worked for the CIA either with or without pay in any way, shape or form. I have no idea where the rumor started. I don't know anyone that knows anything about my history that has ever made such an accusation. On the converse side, going back to the early '60s when I worked for the Senate as counsel for one of their committees, I did an investigation on the CIA and since then I have represented a number of clients in cases against the CIA to the extent that if there's any evidence at all, it all points in the other direction.

Q: Is it possible that the CIA or the FBI has evidence locked away somewhere that could shed new light on the investigations into the JFK assassination or perhaps Martin Luther King's assassination?

A: It's always possible, and there is considerable evidence which is under lock and key in the National Archives today which will remain classified until the year 2039 unless it is declassified by the various government agencies, primarily the FBI and the CIA. In addition to that, there are literally thousands of documents that the CIA did not give to the Warren Commission and did not go to the National Archives which have never been made public. A number of freedom of information suits have resulted in declassification of a part of this material, yet we know from the index they give us that they have a mass of material which has never been made public.

Q: Apart from material that might prove distasteful or hurtful to the Kennedy family, the JFK autopsy photographs for example, is there other evidence or do you feel there's other material under lock and key that could shed significant light on the assassinations?

Plucking the Heartstrings Between Dinner Courses

By William Delaney
Washington Star Staff Writer

NEW YORK — While the Cincinnati Reds were breaking hearts in Yankee Stadium, Jimmy Carter and President Ford were attempting to pluck New York and Catholic heartstrings in the rose-bedecked opulence of the Waldorf Astoria's Grand Ballroom.

Who won the series at last night's annual Alfred E. Smith Memorial Foundation dinner was difficult to determine — in part because most of the $100-a-plate diners appeared to be considerably more conservative than the tradition generally associated with the New York governor whose memory was being honored.

Boldly comparing his presidentia candidacy to that of Democratic Governor Smith in 1928, and noting that he, like the Roman Catholic Smith, is being criticized for his religion and accent, the former Georgia governor provoked boos as well as applause by gently suggesting that a Ford victory might trigger another Depression.

SMITH'S OPPONENT, Republican Herbert Hoover, was "a decent likable man who had never been elected to statewide office," Carter said, "who selected as his running mate a senator from Kansas, and whose campaign statements kept reassuring the American people that the economy was sound and prosperity was just around the corner.

"Unfortunately, in 1928, the wrong candidate won, and the next year we entered the Great Depression. I think and I hope that the results might be different this year."

Ford's earlier, briefer remarks — he left before Carter arrived — were closer to the apolitical spirit these appearances are supposed to have. However, the President bemoaned the "negative tone" of 1976 politics, obviously a reference to any challenger to the status quo.

The celebrity-studded benefit dinner for New York area hospitals — long a "must" appearance for statewide politicians and near-obligatory for presidential candidates since both Richard Nixon and John F. Kennedy spoke in 1960 — was presided over by New York's Terence Cardinal Cooke, who ushered the President and Carter to and from the stage.

BOTH BEGAN with essentially the same gag.

Ford: "Sometimes it gets confusing, but it's always nice to come back home — to Philadelphia."

Carter: "It's a great pleasure to be

TWO-DOSE FLU SHOT LOOK

By Robert Pear
Washington Star Staff Writer

Scientists said today that they have apparently found swine flu vaccine formulations for healthy children aged 3 to 17, who until now were excluded from the government's mass immunization program.

In nationwide trials over the last three mmonths, doctors found that one swine flu shot followed by a booster shot four weeks later seemed conducted in about 3,100 children by investigators at 16 centers around the country, including Children's Hospital in Washington, where 116 youngsters were inoculated. Physicians presented the results of their studies at a meeting today at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda.

"It looks as though a two-dose schedule does work for children," said Dr. Robert Parrott, director of

A: Well, certainly from reviewing the index of the withheld material which they have been forced to supply to various district courts, you get the impression that much very vital information is being withheld. Again, I say, without knowing what that information is, it's hard to say where it's going to point.

Q: Can you hazard a guess as to what they might have?

A: No, I can't. I can only tell you so far as the CIA is concerned a large part of the withheld testimony involves a trip Lee Harvey Oswald made to Mexico just immediately prior to the assassination. No one in the public knows what this trip was all about. But we do know that the CIA has been particularly sensitive with respect to that. We do know that there were CIA cameras taking pictures of people going in and out of the Cuban and Soviet embassies and they took a number of pictures of a man they labeled Lee Harvey Oswald. From looking at him, he is obviously not Lee Harvey Oswald, but the CIA will not identify him

Q: Would it not better serve the American public to just simply release this information and get to the bottom of the matter once and for all?

A: The Committee to Investigate Assassinations has urged through the years that all of the information with respect to the John Kennedy assassination be made public. The official solution is that Lee Harvey Oswald was a lone nut killer and that there were no other people involved and there were no international ramifications. And therefore, taking that story as gospel makes it difficult for a lawyer to see why they should cover anything. However, there is this intense desire on the part of government to keep it secret, and I think in any lawsuit where you have this sort of mania for locking the evidence up you create the suspicion that there's more there. And I don't think anybody at this time outside the government knows what happened to John Kennedy. I think the congressional committees in time will find out.

Q: It has been 13 years since the Kennedy assassination. Why reopen his grave?

A: It's not really a question of reopening his grave. I know the subject is frequently talked about in terms similar to that. I think that the integrity of our whole political process is probably at stake because whether the Warren Commission was right or wrong, I think that the American people — and the polls bear this out — have a great doubt as to whether Oswald was properly investigated. They have a doubt as to whether Oswald was a lone nut killer. And until their doubts can be satisfied, I think the integrity of the system and the credibility of the government is very much weakened.

Q: Why has it taken 13 years for Congress to become officially involved in this?

A: Well, it's a number of reasons. One, I think the membership of the Warren Commission itself contained so many outstanding people that it is difficult to believe that for whatever reason they would not seriously try to give the public a full answer. There's a great reluctance to disbelieve people like Justice Warren and Sen. Russell. Secondly, I think until Watergate people tended to disbelieve that their government could be involved in anything of this nature. But even more recently the revelations, the accounts of the CIA to kill Fidel Castro have gotten rid of the last reluctance there is

Q: Is it conceivable that the Warren Commission — in the interests of national security — participated in or agreed to some sort of cover-up?

A: As a lawyer I tend to believe they made the best conclusion they could from the evidence at hand. We know of so much key evi-people who were good lawyers and good investigators and start with a clean mind and simply go down the same road that others have been going down for 12 years. They chose the latter. That will take somewhat more time, but with the caliber of people that have been chosen I can't see that it's going to take a matter of years. I think it will take a number of months longer than it would going the other way.

Q: Eunice Shriver, who of course lost two brothers to assassins, has said that she would prefer the whole thing be dropped, that the investigations into JFK and Robert Kennedy's deaths shouldn't be opened. How do you respond when a family member expresses this kind of a sentiment?

A: Well, I think all of us feel a basic sympathy, not only for Mrs. Shriver but also for Mrs. Rose Kennedy and for the remaining brother, Sen. Kennedy. But it's my own feeling that the question of what happened to the Kennedy brothers, if something more than meets the eye did occur, is really a matter of national concern and transcends their own very understandable interest in it. I think that the investigation certainly into President Kennedy's death can be done in such a way as to cause minimum grief to the family. And I think there's a very good chance that this will happen because I think the members of the House of Representatives and the members of the Church committee in the Senate are very well aware of the problem, and I can't see any reason why it cannot be done without terribly distasteful evidence being trotted out in public. I just don't think that's necessary.

Q: You were the attorney for James Earl Ray. Do you feel that there is evidence that could clear him or alternatively to prove that he was not the lone assassin?

A: It is my own personal belief that there was a conspiracy. I think that the question would be resolved if James Earl Ray were given a trial. I think most of us in the United States, most of the public certainly, and almost all of Washington that I know were simply amazed when a guilty plea was extracted from him and he went off to serve a 99-year term without a trial. It came as a great shock to most people and I think most people were rather disappointed in a crime of this magnitude a man would not in fact stay for a jury trial. I spent six years trying to achieve this. I must confess I was unsuccessful, but it is very possible that this investigation of the House of Representatives would achieve in a lot shorter period than six years what we were unable to do in the courts.

be satisfied, I think the integrity of the system and the credibility of the government is very much weakened.

Q: Is it conceivable that the Warren Commission — in the interests of national security — participated in or agreed to some sort of cover-up?

A: As a lawyer I tend to believe they made the best conclusion they could from the evidence at hand. We know of so much key evidence that was either withheld or destroyed that you get a general feeling that they had only a relatively small part of the really important material. For example, Lee Harvey Oswald wrote a threatening note to an FBI agent shortly before the assassination. In a matter of an hour or two before Jack Ruby shot Oswald, the FBI agent flushed it down the toilet. Now this was never reported to the Warren Commission. There are certain people who can link Oswald and Ruby, and this material was never passed to the commission. So I think it's a very harsh judgment to say that this very distinguished bunch of Americans — including the chief justice of the United States — purposely did not reach the proper conclusion.

Q: How long will it take the House to investigate this affair and come to some sort of a conclusion. Will it be years away, do you feel?

A: No, I don't think it will be that far away. The House of Representatives had two basic roads they could have followed. They could have taken their staff members, people who were thoroughly familiar with the subject but equally opinionated, or they could start with

Students, Teachers Arrested In Raid on Soweto School

JOHANNESBURG — Riot police raided a high school in Soweto, a large black township 10 miles south of Johannesburg, today and arrested all students and teachers in the building.

Police Col. J. Visser, head of the criminal investigation division in Soweto, a center of black unrest in South Africa, refused to comment on the raid.

The number of persons detained was not disclosed, but witnesses said police used four large vans to carry away those arrested.

When police arrived at the school, a number of students rushed into the classrooms and warned their teachers and other students, the black newspaper The World reported.

It said the raiding party included black and white police, some in uniform and others wearing battle fatigues.

Heavily armed riot police in camouflage battle dress patrolled parts of central Johannesburg amid rumors of possible racial unrest in the city.

A police spokesman described the patrols as "purely precautionary" and said the possibility of trouble was slight.

Police have been on alert in the central business distict of Johannesburg, the nation's commercial capital, ever since downtown demonstrations by black youths in September.

trotted out in public. I just don't think that's necessary.

Q: You were the attorney for James Earl Ray. Do you feel that there is evidence that could clear him or alternatively to prove that he was not the lone assassin?

I spent six years trying to achieve this. I must confess I was unsuccessful, but it is very possible that this investigation of the House of Representatives would achieve in a lot shorter period than six years what we were unable to do in the courts.

Q: The FBI is now known to have hounded Martin Luther King and there has been speculation that the FBI may have some way been involved in his death. Do you subscribe to this possibility?

A: I have seen no evidence to that effect and I have seen in both the John F. Kennedy case and the Martin Luther King case that one has to be careful to distinguish between the crime and the investigation. I think in the Martin Luther King case that the FBI because of its animosity for Dr. King may not have made what we would consider their best effort to investigate it. But we have made a long jump from that possibility to the possiblity that we had anything to do with killing. It seems to me that these are questions that gave the congressional commmittee the powers that they have. I don't really know that speculating gets anywhere.

Q: Your Committee to Investigate Assassinations, what do you think it has been able to accomplish? Why was it formed?

A: It was formed for two basic reasons. One was to get the critics of the Warren Commission to coordinate their efforts. The basic aims of the group were to gather information to keep the subject of John Kennedy's assassination alive until we could convince the Congress to reopen their own investigation. Fortunately, I think we've been very successful. The subject has been kept alive. As the climate in the country changed, the climate in Congress changed, we were able, with the help of a lot of other people, to persuade them go in with a full-fledged investigation. We intend to turn over all of our investigation to them and to give any other assistance.

Q: There's been an eternal fascination with John F. Kennedy's murder. Do you think when or if the House investigation reaches its conclusion that will lay to rest finally the speculation?

A: I believe that if this House committee continues to get the support in the next Congress that they have in the last months of this Congress, that they will investigate this killing thoroughly. I think they will cull out the leads, I think they will look at all the evidence, and if after that length of time and that length of investigating, they conclude that the Warren Commission was correct, I certainly think that 99.9 percent of the people will be satisfied. I must say that in all honesty, I know of a few people who are never going to be satisfied, at least you can never satisfy all of them because they each have a particular theory. And these theories are internally inconsistent if nothing else. But I think that as a practical matter that if a congressional commmittee, and if not this one, maybe the Senate commmittee or maybe both of them, will attack the job they are supposed to do, I think that most of the doubts, if not all of them, will be laid to rest.

Again, I say, without knowing what that information is, it's hard to say where it's going to point.

Q: Can you hazard a guess as to what they might have?

A: No, I can't. I can only tell you so far as the CIA is concerned a large part of the withheld testimony involves a trip Lee Harvey Oswald made to Mexico just immediately prior to the assassination. No one in the public knows what this trip was all about. But we do know that the CIA has been particularly sensitive with respect to that. We do know that there were CIA cameras taking pictures of people going in and out of the Cuban and Soviet embassies and they took a number of pictures of a man they labeled Lee Harvey Oswald. From looking at him, he is obviously not Lee Harvey Oswald, but the CIA will not identify him

Q: Would it not better serve the American public to just simply release this information and get to the bottom of the matter once and for all?

A: The Committee to Investigate Assassinations has urged through the years that all of the information with respect to the John Kennedy assassination be made public. The official solution is that Lee Harvey Oswald was a lone nut killer and that there were no other people involved and there were no international ramifications. And therefore, taking that story as gospel makes it difficult for a lawyer to see why they should cover anything. However, there is this intense desire on the part of government to keep it secret, and I think in any lawsuit where you have this sort of mania for locking the evidence up you create the suspicion that there's more there. And I don't think anybody at this time outside the government knows what happened to John Kennedy. I think the congressional committees in time will find out.

Q: It has been 13 years since the Kennedy assassination. Why reopen his grave?

A: It's not really a question of reopening his grave. I know the subject is frequently talked about in terms similar to that. I think that the integrity of our whole political process is probably at stake because whether the Warren Commission was right or wrong, I think that the American people — and the polls bear this out — have a great doubt as to whether Oswald was properly investigated. They have a doubt as to whether Oswald was a lone nut killer. And until their doubts can be satisfied, I think the integrity of the system and the credibility of the government is very much weakened.

Q: Why has it taken 13 years for Congress to become officially involved in this?

A: Well, it's a number of reasons. One, I think the membership of the Warren Commission itself contained so many outstanding people that it is difficult to believe that for whatever reason they would not seriously try to give the public a full answer. There's a great reluctance to disbelieve people like Justice Warren and Sen. Russell. people who were good lawyers and good investigators and start with a clean mind and simply go down the same road that others have been going down for 12 years. They chose the latter. That will take somewhat more time, but with the caliber of people that have been chosen I can't see that it's going to take a matter of years. I think it will take a number of months longer than it would going the other way.

Q: Eunice Shriver, who of course lost two brothers to assassins, has said that she would prefer the whole thing be dropped, that the investigations into JFK and Robert Kennedy's deaths shouldn't be opened. How do you respond when a family member expresses this kind of a sentiment?

A: Well, I think all of us feel a basic sympathy, not only for Mrs. Shriver but also for Mrs. Rose Kennedy and for the remaining brother, Sen. Kennedy. But it's my own feeling that the question of what happened to the Kennedy brothers, if something more than meets the eye did occur, is really a matter of national concern and transcends their own very understandable interest in it. I think that the investigation certainly into President Kennedy's death can be done in such a way as to cause minimum grief to the family. And I think there's a very good chance that this will happen because I think the members of the House of Representatives and the members of the Church committee in the Senate are very well aware of the problem, and I can't see any reason why it cannot be done without terribly distasteful evidence being trotted out in public. I just don't think that's necessary.

Q: You were the attorney for James Earl Ray. Do you feel that there is evidence that could clear him or alternatively to prove that he was not the lone assassin?

A: It is my own personal belief that there was a conspiracy. I think that the question would be resolved if James Earl Ray were given a trial. I think most of us in the United States, most of the public certainly, and almost all of Washington that I know were simply amazed when a guilty plea was extracted from him and he went off to serve a 99-year term without a trial. It came as a great shock to most people and I think most people were rather disappointed in a crime of this magnitude a man would not in fact stay for a jury trial. I spent six years trying to achieve this. I must confess I was unsuccessful, but it is very possible that this investigation of the House of Representatives would achieve in a lot shorter period than six years what we were unable to do in the courts.

a lone nut killer. And until their doubts can be satisfied, I think the integrity of the system and the credibility of the government is very much weakened.

Q: Why has it taken 13 years for Congress to become officially involved in this?

A: Well, it's a number of reasons. One, I think the membership of the Warren Commission itself contained so many outstanding people that it is difficult to believe that for whatever reason they would not seriously try to give the public a full answer. There's a great reluctance to disbelieve people like Justice Warren and Sen. Russell. Secondly, I think until Watergate people tended to disbelieve that their government could be involved in anything of this nature. But even more recently the revelations, the accounts of the CIA to kill Fidel Castro have gotten rid of the last reluctance there is

Q: Is it conceivable that the Warren Commission — in the interests of national security — participated in or agreed to some sort of cover-up?

A: As a lawyer I tend to believe they made the best conclusion they could from the evidence at hand. We know of so much key evidence that was either withheld or destroyed that you get a general feeling that they had only a relatively small part of the really important material. For example, Lee Harvey Oswald wrote a threatening note to an FBI agent shortly before the assassination. In a matter of an hour or two before Jack Ruby shot Oswald, the FBI agent flushed it down the toilet. Now this was never reported to the Warren Commission. There are certain people who can link Oswald and Ruby, and this material was never passed to the commission. So I think it's a very harsh judgment to say that this very distinguished bunch of Americans — including the chief justice of the United States — purposely did not reach the proper conclusion.

Q: How long will it take the House to investigate this affair and come to some sort of a conclusion. Will it be years away, do you feel?

A: No, I don't think it will be that far away. The House of Representatives had two basic roads they could have followed. They could have taken their staff members, people who were thoroughly familiar with the subject but equally opinionated, or they could start with without terribly distasteful evidence being trotted out in public. I just don't think that's necessary.

Q: You were the attorney for James Earl Ray. Do you feel that there is evidence that could clear him or alternatively to prove that he was not the lone assassin?

A: It is my own personal belief that there was a conspiracy. I think that the question would be resolved if James Earl Ray were given a trial. I think most of us in the United States, most of the public certainly, and almost all of Washington that I know were simply amazed when a guilty plea was extracted from him and he went off to serve a 99-year term without a trial. It came as a great shock to most people and I think most people were rather disappointed in a crime of this magnitude a man would not in fact stay for a jury trial. I spent six years trying to achieve this. I must confess I was unsuccessful, but it is very possible that this investigation of the House of Representatives would achieve in a lot shorter period than six years what we were unable to do in the courts.

Q: The FBI is now known to have hounded Martin Luther King and there has been speculation that the FBI may have some way been involved in his death. Do you subscribe to this possibility?

A: I have seen no evidence to that effect and I have seen in both the John F. Kennedy case and the Martin Luther King case that one has to be careful to distinguish between the crime and the investigation. I think in the Martin Luther King case that the FBI because of its animosity for Dr. King may not have made what we would consider their best effort to investigate it. But we have made a long jump from that possibility to the possiblity that we had anything to do with killing. It seems to me that these are questions that gave the congressional commmittee the powers that they have. I don't really know that speculating gets anywhere.

Q: Your Committee to Investigate Assassinations, what do you think it has been able to accomplish? Why was it formed?

A: It was formed for two basic reasons. One was to get the critics of the Warren Commission to coordinate their efforts. The basic aims of the group were to gather information to keep the subject of John Kennedy's assassination alive until we could convince the Congress to reopen their own investigation. Fortunately, I think we've been very successful. The subject has been kept alive. As the climate in the country changed, the climate in Congress changed, we were able, with the help of a lot of other people, to persuade them go in with a full-fledged investigation. We intend to turn over all of our investigation to them and to give any other assistance.

Q: There's been an eternal fascination with John F. Kennedy's murder. Do you think when or if the House investigation reaches its conclusion that will lay to rest finally the speculation?

A: I believe that if this House committee continues to get the support in the next Congress that they have in the last months of this Congress, that they will investigate this killing thoroughly. I think they will cull out the leads, I think they will look at all the evidence, and if after that length of time and that length of investigating, they conclude that the Warren Commission was correct, I certainly think that 99.9 percent of the people will be satisfied. I must say that in all honesty, I know of a few people who are never going to be satisfied, at least you can never satisfy all of them because they each have a particular theory. And these theories are internally inconsistent if nothing else. But I think that as a practical matter that if a congressional commmittee, and if not this one, maybe the Senate commmittee or maybe both of them, will attack the job they are supposed to do, I think that most of the doubts, if not all of them, will be laid to rest.

Students, Teachers Arrested In Raid on Soweto School

JOHANNESBURG — Riot police raided a high school in Soweto, a large black township 10 miles south of Johannesburg, today and arrested all students and teachers in the building.

Police Col. J. Visser, head of the criminal investigation division in Soweto, a center of black unrest in South Africa, refused to comment on the raid.

The number of persons detained was not disclosed, but witnesses said police used four large vans to carry away those arrested.

When police arrived at the school, a number of students rushed into the classrooms and warned their teachers and other students, the black newspaper The World reported.

It said the raiding party included black and white police, some in uniform and others wearing battle fatigues.

Heavily armed riot police in camouflage battle dress patrolled parts of central Johannesburg amid rumors of possible racial unrest in the city.

A police spokesman described the patrols as "purely precautionary" and said the possibility of trouble was slight.

Police have been on alert in the central business distict of Johannesburg, the nation's commercial capital, ever since downtown demonstrations by black youths in September.

Q and A

'U.S. Integrity Is at Stake In JFK Probe'

Bernard Fensterwald Jr., a Washington lawyer who represented James McCord during Watergate and James Earl Ray, convicted of killing Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., heads the Committee to Investigate Assassinations, a group of private citizens that has investigated the slayings of President John F. Kennedy and others. He was interviewed by Washington Star Staff Writer Michael J. Satchell.

Q: The Committee to Investigate Assassinations has long been suspected by some people of being somehow connected with the CIA and you yourself being labeled possibly a CIA agent or CIA plant. Are you in fact a CIA agent of any sort?

Fensterwald: No, I'm a full-time lawyer. Neither I nor my partner have ever been affiliated with the CIA or worked for the CIA either with or without pay in any way, shape or form. I have no idea where the rumor started. I don't know anyone that knows anything about my history that has ever made such an accusation. On the converse side, going back to the early '60s when I worked for the Senate as counsel for one of their committees, I did an investigation on the CIA and since then I have represented a number of clients in cases against the CIA to the extent that if there's any evidence at all, it all points in the other direction.

Q: Is it possible that the CIA or the FBI has evidence locked away somewhere that could shed new light on the investigations into the JFK assassination or perhaps Martin Luther King's assassination?

A: It's always possible, and there is considerable evidence which is under lock and key in the National Archives today which will remain classified until the year 2039 unless it is declassified by the various government agencies, primarily the FBI and the CIA. In addition to that, there are literally thousands of documents that the CIA did not give to the Warren Commission and did not go to the National Archives which have never been made public. A number of freedom of information suits have resulted in declassification of a part of this material, yet we know from the index they give us that they have a mass of material which has never been made public.

Q: Apart from material that might prove distasteful or hurtful to the Kennedy family, the JFK autopsy photographs for example, is there other evidence or do you feel there's other material under lock and key that could shed significant light on the assassinations?

Plucking the Heartstrings Between Dinner Courses

By William Delaney
Washington Star Staff Writer

NEW YORK — While the Cincinnati Reds were breaking hearts in Yankee Stadium, Jimmy Carter and President Ford were attempting to pluck New York and Catholic heartstrings in the rose-bedecked opulence of the Waldorf Astoria's Grand Ballroom.

Who won the series at last night's annual Alfred E. Smith Memorial Foundation dinner was difficult to determine — in part because most of the $100-a-plate diners appeared to be considerably more conservative than the tradition generally associated with the New York governor whose memory was being honored.

Boldly comparing his presidentia candidacy to that of Democratic Governor Smith in 1928, and noting that he, like the Roman Catholic Smith, is being criticized for his religion and accent, the former Georgia governor provoked boos as well as applause by gently suggesting that a Ford victory might trigger another Depression.

SMITH'S OPPONENT, Republican Herbert Hoover, was "a decent likable man who had never been elected to statewide office," Carter said, "who selected as his running mate a senator from Kansas, and whose campaign statements kept reassuring the American people that the economy was sound and prosperity was just around the corner.

"Unfortunately, in 1928, the wrong candidate won, and the next year we entered the Great Depression. I think and I hope that the results might be different this year."

Ford's earlier, briefer remarks — he left before Carter arrived — were closer to the apolitical spirit these appearances are supposed to have. However, the President bemoaned the "negative tone" of 1976 politics, obviously a reference to any challenger to the status quo.

The celebrity-studded benefit dinner for New York area hospitals — long a "must" appearance for statewide politicians and near-obligatory for presidential candidates since both Richard Nixon and John F. Kennedy spoke in 1960 — was presided over by New York's Terence Cardinal Cooke, who ushered the President and Carter to and from the stage.

BOTH BEGAN with essentially the same gag.

Ford: "Sometimes it gets confusing, but it's always nice to come back home — to Philadelphia."

Carter: "It's a great pleasure to be

TWO-DOSE FLU SHOT LOOKS

By Robert Pear
Washington Star Staff Writer

Scientists said today that they have apparently found swine flu vaccine formulations for healthy children aged 3 to 17, who until now were excluded from the government's mass immunization program.

In nationwide trials over the last three mmonths, doctors found that one swine flu shot followed by a booster shot four weeks later seemed conducted in about 3,100 children by investigators at 16 centers around the country, including Children's Hospital in Washington, where 116 youngsters were inoculated. Physicians presented the results of their studies at a meeting today at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda.

"It looks as though a two-dose schedule does work for children," said Dr. Robert Parrott, director o

Joe Young and John Cramer

Joe Young and John Cramer write The Star's Federal Column daily on page two of the Metro Section. They are noted, quoted and tacked on bulletin boards throughout the federal establishment as they write their daily almanac of information for the government employe.

a lone nut killer. And until their doubts can be satisfied, I think the integrity of the system and the credibility of the government is very much weakened.

Q: Why has it taken 13 years for Congress to become officially involved in this?

A: Well, it's a number of reasons. One, I think the membership of the Warren Commission itself contained so many outstanding people that it is difficult to believe that for whatever reason they would not seriously try to give the public a full answer. There's a great reluctance to disbelieve people like Justice Warren and Sen. Russell. Secondly, I think until Watergate people tended to disbelieve that their government could be involved in anything of this nature. But even more recently the revelations, the accounts of the CIA to kill Fidel Castro have gotten rid of the last reluctance there is

Q: Is it conceivable that the Warren Commission — in the interests of national security — participated in or agreed to some sort of cover-up?

A: As a lawyer I tend to believe they made the best conclusion they could from the evidence at hand. We know of so much key evidence that was either withheld or destroyed that you get a general feeling that they had only a relatively small part of the really important material. For example, Lee Harvey Oswald wrote a threatening note to an FBI agent shortly before the assassination. In a matter of an hour or two before Jack Ruby shot Oswald, the FBI agent flushed it down the toilet. Now this was never reported to the Warren Commission. There are certain people who can link Oswald and Ruby, and this material was never passed to the commission. So I think it's a very harsh judgment to say that this very distinguished bunch of Americans — including the chief justice of the United States — purposely did not reach the proper conclusion.

Q: How long will it take the House to investigate this affair and come to some sort of a conclusion. Will it be years away, do you feel?

A: No, I don't think it will be that far away. The House of Representatives had two basic roads they could have followed. They could have taken their staff members, people who were thoroughly familiar with the subject but equally opinionated, or they could start with

JOHANNESBURG — Riot police raided a high school in Soweto, a large black township 10 miles south of Johannesburg, today and arrested all students and teachers in the building.

Police Col. J. Visser, head of the criminal investigation division in Soweto, a center of black unrest in South Africa, refused to comment on the raid.

The number of persons detained was not disclosed, but witnesses said police used four large vans to carry away those arrested.

When police arrived at the school, a number of students rushed into the classrooms and warned their teachers and other students, the black newspaper The World reported.

It said the raiding party included black and white police, some in uniform and others wearing battle fatigues.

Heavily armed riot police in camouflage battle dress patrolled parts of central Johannesburg amid rumors of possible racial unrest in the city.

A police spokesman described the patrols as "purely precautionary" and said the possibility of trouble was slight.

Police have been on alert in the central business distict of Johannesburg, the nation's commercial capital, ever since downtown demonstrations by black youths in September.

trotted out in public. I just don't think that's necessary.

Q: You were the attorney for James Earl Ray. Do you feel that there is evidence that could clear him or alternatively to prove that he was not the lone assassin?

A: It is my own personal belief that there was a conspiracy. I think that the question would be resolved if James Earl Ray were given a trial. I think most of us in the United States, most of the public certainly, and almost all of Washington that I know were simply amazed when a guilty plea was extracted from him and he went off to serve a 99-year term without a trial. It came as a great shock to most people and I think most people were rather disappointed in a crime of this magnitude a man would not in fact stay for a jury trial. I spent six years trying to achieve this. I must confess I was unsuccessful, but it is very possible that this investigation of the House of Representatives would achieve in a lot shorter period than six years what we were unable to do in the courts.

Q: The FBI is now known to have hounded Martin Luther King and there has been speculation that the FBI may have some way been involved in his death. Do you subscribe to this possibility?

A: I have seen no evidence to that effect and I have seen in both the John F. Kennedy case and the Martin Luther King case that one has to be careful to distinguish between the crime and the investigation. I think in the Martin Luther King case that the FBI because of its animosity for Dr. King may not have made what we would consider their best effort to investigate it. But we have made a long jump from that possibility to the possiblity that we had anything to do with killing. It seems to me that these are questions that gave the congressional commmittee the powers that they have. I don't really know that speculating gets anywhere.

Q: Your Committee to Investigate Assassinations, what do you think it has been able to accomplish? Why was it formed?

A: It was formed for two basic reasons. One was to get the critics of the Warren Commission to coordinate their efforts. The basic aims of the group were to gather information to keep the subject of John Kennedy's assassination alive until we could convince the Congress to reopen their own investigation. Fortunately, I think we've been very successful. The subject has been kept alive. As the climate in the country changed, the climate in Congress changed, we were able, with the help of a lot of other people, to persuade them go in with a full-fledged investigation. We intend to turn over all of our investigation to them and to give any other assistance.

Q: There's been an eternal fascination with John F. Kennedy's murder. Do you think when or if the House investigation reaches its conclusion that will lay to rest finally the speculation?

A: I believe that if this House committee continues to get the support in the next Congress that they have in the last months of this Congress, that they will investigate this killing thoroughly. I think they will cull out the leads, I think they will look at all the evidence, and if after that length of time and that length of investigating, they conclude that the Warren Commission was correct, I certainly think that 99.9 percent of the people will be satisfied. I must say that in all honesty, I know of a few people who are never going to be satisfied, at least you can never satisfy all of them because they each have a particular theory. And these theories are internally inconsistent if nothing else. But I think that as a practical matter that if a congressional commmittee, and if not this one, maybe the Senate commmittee or maybe both of them, will attack the job they are supposed to do, I think that most of the doubts, if not all of them, will be laid to rest.
